

English for Work - Advanced (C1)

CORE LEARNING PHRASES | PERSONAL WORK OS

Today's Focus Giving an executive update when performance is off track

1. Executive-ready model

Status - Driver - Impact - Action

We're currently tracking below target, primarily due to weaker-than-expected performance in several key accounts. The shortfall is concentrated rather than broad-based, so the full-year impact remains manageable. We have isolated the main drivers and are taking two corrective actions. I would like to align today on the owners and timing.

Let me separate what is temporary from what is structural.

I'll focus on the two variances that materially affect the outlook.

The gap is manageable, but the trajectory needs attention.

We have contained the immediate risk; the next step is to restore momentum.

We're still awaiting the final input from Sales, which is the remaining dependency for completing the analysis. To keep Friday's review on track, could we align on Thursday noon as the cut-off for final inputs?

We're currently behind schedule on the monthly report refresh because two customer files arrived later than planned. The delay affects the customer-level variance analysis, but the management summary remains on track. We have prioritized the missing files and assigned clear owners. I need final confirmation from Sales by noon tomorrow to protect Friday's review.

QUICK PRACTICE

Deliver a four-sentence update: Status - Driver - Impact - Action.